Women Leaders in Data Center Construction Management Sweep Top Roles at Weeks Group and Establish New WOSB (Woman Owned Small Business) Designation

Weeks Group, LLC, a leading provider of consulting services in data center construction, proudly announces our latest milestone: a transformative evolution to a Women-Owned Small Business (WOSB) with women now commanding our highest leadership positions.

This pivotal moment takes place on January 1, with Lisa Weeks at the helm as the company's new CEO. Co-owner Lucy Platt Weeks has been tapped to steer the financial future of the company as CFO. These changes bring pathbreaking vision into action and will set the stage for continued growth and innovation.

Lisa has proven herself integral to the success of Weeks Group, bringing dedication, exemplary skill, and 20 years' experience in communications and management spanning politics, media, and industry to the team. Her innovative passion for the business will strengthen and deepen the Weeks Group portfolio of opportunities.

Lucy Platt Weeks excels at training an analytical eye on any problem she confronts, contributing a pragmatic and grounding force within the company. After overseeing the financial structure of Weeks Group for several years, she is fully prepared to take the reins of the company's financial future.

Aaron Weeks, the founder and former CEO, is looking forward to these changes and the opportunity to focus on guiding industry-transforming innovations and consultation. His dedication and leadership have been instrumental in the company's growth and sterling reputation, for which we extend our deepest gratitude.

According to Uptime Institute, most data center operators report that women comprise less than 10% of their staff. As the data center industry continues to struggle with a lack of balance in diversity and inclusion, Weeks Group is honored to step ahead of the curve and demonstrate positive transformation. We believe inclusion and diversity will positively impact strategic planning, leading to higher industry efficiency and resiliency.

About us: Weeks Group is a leading provider of owner's representative project management consulting services dedicated to serving hyper-scale data center construction clients.
